

Course Description – Curriculum 2013

Subject: IS315 Information System Analysis

Credits: 3

Prerequisite: IS201 and IS314

Description: This course cover various topics that are important for the information system analyst and designer. The topics cover in this course vary from basic and intermediate issues that are pertinent to the analyst and designer. Issues such as problem solving through system thinking as well as how to solve real world business problems with systematic thinking and analytical skills. The activities cover in this course such as a Computer Aided Software Engineering (CASE) learning will provide a hand-on experience for the students taking the course.