Macquarie University is one of the most innovative universities in Australia. Its vision on internationalisation and constant development attracts many international students and some of the world's top researchers. The university is growing rapidly with a strong reputation in the business and finance area of which graduates' starting salaries are among the highest in Australia. While you are studying at MQ, you will be prepared not only to build a lifetime of learning, but also to become a leader the world will need in the future.

3-year business degree at MQ requires you lots of workloads in each course, nevertheless you will be provided with a variety of learning tools to assist you throughout the course. If you cannot attend a lecture or miss something from the class, you can always listen to recorded i-Lecture, allowing you to study wherever you are. Park-like campus creates a relaxing atmosphere, yet suitable for learning. After a long day of studying, you might want to visit MQ's modern sport and aquatic centre, go shopping at the next-door shopping complex or simply lay down beside the pond in the middle of campus.

Despite studying hard, MQ students enjoy doing activities and volunteering. Workshops, social events and student parties are held daily across the 126 hectare campus. MQ supports several famous student-run organisations, for example, AIESEC and ASES, and it also originates a leadership association called Global Leadership Program. The program includes various skill-developing seminars, weekend trips, public-speaking events, and opportunity to study or volunteer abroad. It is one of exchange students' favourites every year.

Outside campus, one thing you need to do while you are here is exploring Sydney CBD. You might have been here before when travelling with family, but living here is much different. Go surfing at the Bondi Beach, visit the Sydney Fisher Market, attend Summer Music Festival, climb the Sydney Bridge and watch world-class performances at the Opera House. From Sydney, travelling interstate or abroad is at ease. Concession card for exchange students allows you to pay for transportation or admission fees at a half price. If you have longed for the time to go backpacking, this is it!
